A.O. 188.—Regimental Charitable Funds.

EDWARD R.I.

WHEREAS We deem it expedient to amend the regulations governing the administration of regimental charitable funds under the Statute 21 and 23 Vict., cap. 20;

Our WILL AND PLEASURE is that paragraph 33 of the Regulations for Savings Banks and Regimental Charitable Funds (promulgated by Army Order 89 of 1897) be cancelled, and that the following be substituted for paragraph 30 of the same:—

50. Payments from the regimental charitable funds will, as provided by the Military Savings Banks Act, be strictly confined to objects or purposes connected with non-commissioned officers and soldiers. Donations may be made to meritorious discharged soldiers, and to the wives, widows, and children of soldiers, or on account of payments of a charitable nature, or for purposes of amusement or recreation of the men; but, in making any donations, the terms of any deed or other instrument under which money has been given to the fund will be observed. The officer commanding is pro. tem. the trustee of the fund, and will be held responsible for any payment not in accordance with these instructions. Charges will be admitted in the paymaster's accounts if vouched by proof of payment, and by the authority of the officer commanding, but the charges will not exceed the interest on the fund for the year without the concurrence of the General Officer Commanding. Any portion of the year's interest which may be unspent will be added to capital, and will only be available for expenditure in another year under the authority of the General Officer Commanding.

Given at Our Court at St. James's, this 26th day of August, 1901 in the 1st year of Our Reign.

By His Majesty's Command,
St. JOHN BRODRICK.

KING'S REGULATIONS.

A.O. 189.—(a) Military Training.

1. In issuing the following instructions, the Commander-in-Chief desires to impress on General and Commanding Officers that, while due attention should be paid to the administrative requirements of the Army, the efficient instruction and training of all ranks is an object of paramount importance, which can only be attained by a proper complement of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men being present with their respective units throughout the period of annual training.

The Commander-in-Chief has reason to believe that an unnecessarily large number of officers and men are in many cases employed on duties which, with careful supervision and a suitable adjustment of local requirements, might be discontinued or reduced without detriment to the service. He therefore directs that general and other officers commanding will periodically check, and, as far as local exigencies will admit, reduce the number of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men who are absent from their units on garrison, regimental, or other duties and employments.

2. The following will be substituted for paragraphs 1058 to 1060A of the King's Regulations and Orders for the Army:—

General Instructions.

1058. The training of troops in peace is governed by what they are required to do in war. The basis of military efficiency is the careful individual instruction of the soldier, and a gradual progression from the simple to the more difficult exercises. Theoretical instruction should precede and accompany all practical training, it should be adapted to the level of the soldier's intelligence, and it should always be personally conducted by the officers.

In the training of every regimental officer, whether senior or junior in rank, the main points to be borne in mind are the formation of character and the development of resourcefulness, prompt decision, and a readiness to accept responsibility, and to act with sound judgment in accordance with the circumstances of the moment.

In the training of the rank and file, the development of individual intelligence and self-reliance, coupled with the maintenance of discipline and esprit de corps is the primary consideration.

1059. The officer ought to be in all respects the instructor and leader of his men. The proper performance of his duties depends not only on his zeal, temper, and common sense, but on the thoroughness of his professional education. He must show himself superior to the soldier in knowledge, experience and strength of character, and he must be competent to carry out his duty in any situation whatsoever, without shrinking from responsibility, or, when thrown on his own resources, without waiting for orders. Commanding officers, assisted by their second in command, are responsible for the theoretical and practical education of the officers under their orders in all professional subjects, and also for their acquiring the qualifications for advancement indicated above.

The theoretical instruction will include war games, lectures, winter reconnaissances, and schemes worked out on the ground.

Non-commissioned officers should also receive special instruction and training. The responsibility in this matter devolves on squadron, battery, and company commanders, who must aim at rendering their non-commissioned officers competent instructors and leaders of the smaller units in both war and peace.

Commanding officers are responsible for the efficiency and readiness for active service of their respective units. Squadron and company commanders are responsible to their commanding officers for the efficiency in all branches of military training of the men under their orders [except recruits], both collectively and individually, and for the maintenance of a proper system of instruction.

This devolution of authority and responsibility depends for its success upon a reasonable latitude being allowed to squadron and company commanders as to the details of instruction and training. Commanding and General Officers should not interfere, unless they perceive that the methods employed are not such as to ensure a satisfactory result.

The efficiency of squadron and company commanders will be judged by the readiness for war of their respective commands. In recommending an officer for promotion, the commanding officer will certify that he is a competent instructor and leader of men.

With the necessary modifications, the same rules will apply to battery commanders and their subordinate officers.

1060a. In the cavalry and infantry, the second in command is responsible to the commanding officer for the complete instruction of all recruits, including officers, in every branch of military training, before they are passed on to squadron and company commanders. In this duty, which will be carried on under the direction of the commanding officer, the second in command will be assisted by the adjutant, assistant adjutant, riding master, and regimental or battalion staff. The training of all recruits, before being passed on to squadron and company commanders, will be practically tested by the commanding officer.

Similarly, the training of all recruits, before they join the head-quarters of a unit, will be practically tested by the officer commanding the depot or regimental district as the case may be.

Attention is drawn to paragraph 1077, which prescribes that the further training of recruits on transfer from the depot to the head-quarters of a unit is to be taken up from the point at which it was left off at the depot.

Drafts sent from units at home to units abroad, if they have completed their course of recruits' training, are to be treated as trained soldiers on joining their new units.

1060b. The use of his weapons will be learnt by the soldier as a recruit; and the squadron or company commander will afterwards be responsible that the soldier's efficiency in this respect is not only maintained, but, if possible, increased.

(b) Military Prisons.

The following will be substituted for paragraphs 627 to 652:—

MILITARY PRISONS.

627. Military prisons established at home and in the colonies, under the provisions of the Army Act, are under the control of the Inspector-General of Military Prisons, with whom General Officers will correspond direct on all subjects connected therewith. Military prisons are classified as Central, District, or Branch Prisons. Sentences of imprisonment over 14 days will be served in a central or district prison. Sentences of imprisonment up to 14 days will be served (a) in a branch prison, or (b) in a central or district prison, whichever may be nearest to the station from which the offender is committed. The orders for the administration of military prisons, as well as the duties of officers and others employed in them are laid down in the "Rules for Military Prisons."

627a. Soldiers committed to military prisons will, in addition to the articles specified in the Clothing Regulations, take with them the following articles:—

Mounted services.—The articles of equipment, &c., laid down for "marching order—on the man," on the page 26 of Cavalry Drill, 1896, with the exception of revolver and pouch.

Dismounted services.—The articles of equipment, &c., laid down for "marching order" in the orders of parade, Section 224, Infantry Drill, 1896, with the exception of rifle, bayonet, scabbard, and entrenching tools.

Branch Prisons.

628. Soldiers sentenced to terms of imprisonment exceeding the periods authorized to be carried out in the available branch prison may nevertheless be committed to such prison pending removal to a civil, central, or district prison.

629. Branch prisons may also be used for the safe custody of soldiers remanded for trial by court-martial, or who have been tried and are waiting the promulgation of the finding and sentence of a court-martial, whenever there is available accommodation and arrangements can be made for their being supplied with the ordinary rations and messing of soldiers during such detention. The commitment will be made on Form M*. They should be allowed to take exercise together during a reasonable portion of each day, and be kept apart from prisoners undergoing sentence. They will not be obliged to labour otherwise than by being employed in drill, fatigue, and other duties similar in kind and amount to those they might be called on to perform if not under detention. As these men will not receive the ordinary prison diet, they will be shown separately in the prison provision accounts.

630. Before commitment to prison under sentence of court-martial, a prisoner committed for safe custody as above will be discharged from the branch prison, and Form N* will be used for this purpose. When the prison is not inconveniently distant, the prisoner will be removed to his corps for the purpose of promulgation of the finding and sentence of the court.

631. No cell is to be occupied until it has been certified by the Inspector-General of military prisons to be of such a size, and to be ventilated, warmed, and fitted up in such a manner, as may be necessary for the health of the prisoners. The sanction for the occupation of the cells to the extent certified will be communicated to the local authorities by the War Office, and commanding officers of units are to be informed, on their arrival at a station, as to the cells which are fit for occupation. Officers commanding stations will ascertain, before permitting prisoners to be committed to prison, that the foregoing regulations have been complied with.

632. At stations abroad, the duty of ascertaining the state of the cells will devolve on a military staff officer appointed by the General Officer Commanding, assisted by an officer of the Royal Engineers. The fitness of the cells for occupation will, before they are occupied by prisoners, be certified by the former officer to the officer commanding at the station.

633. Cancelled.

634. Prisoners are invariably to be committed to, or released from, the branch prison after the regular dinner hour, and before dark. The arms and ammunition of all prisoners, as well as any money or superfluous article in the possession of the soldier, will be taken from him before he is sent to prison, and restored to him upon his return to duty.

65. Cancelled.

* See paragraph 626.

636. Before admission to branch prisons prisoners are to be examined by a medical officer, who will furnish a certificate as to their state of health, and report any disability likely to prevent or interfere with the execution of the punishment awarded, or any part thereof.

637. Commanding officers are to send to the prisons for their prisoners at the expiration of the terms of their imprisonment. Should they fail to do so, a report is to be made of the omission, and the men should be sent to their corps under the charge of one of the assistants, or to the corps to which they have been attached, so that no one shall by any possibility, be detained in confinement beyond the period of his sentence.

638. Cancelled.

639. Branch prisons are to be inspected, and each prisoner visited daily, by an orderly officer of the garrison and by a medical officer, who is to be named periodically in orders for that duty. These officers will send daily reports of such inspections to the officer commanding the garrison.

640. Cancelled.

641. Before receiving a prisoner into custody the warrant or non-commissioned officer in charge of a branch prison will ascertain that he has been committed by proper authority, and will, without reference to other authority, receive all such prisoners to the extent of the accommodation available. He will also discharge prisoners before the expiration of their sentences when required to do so by competent authority, but he will be careful that the discharge order bears the signature of the proper officer.

642. He will report daily to the staff officer of the garrison the number of vacant cells, and commanding officers before committing prisoners to the branch prison will ascertain whether they can be received into that prison.

643. He is to be allowed, as assistants, such a number of soldiers as may be deemed necessary, and a private soldier as cook.

Garrison Provost-Sergeants

644. The garrison provost-serjeant will perform such garrison duty as may be directed by the officer commanding. He will, subject to any garrison orders, visit canteens, repress irregularities, and clear the barracks and military premises of loose and disorderly characters. He will at all times avoid coming into personal collision with soldiers.

645. He will be assisted in his duties by a garrison police composed of such number of soldiers as may be deemed necessary by the officer commanding.

646. The garrison provost-serjeant and the garrison police will, for discipline, be placed under the command of a staff officer serving at the station.

Barrack Cells and Regimental Provost-Sergeants.

647. Barrack cells will be governed by the same rules as the late garrison provost prisons, but will be under the control and supervision of the officer commanding the unit to which the prison is appropriated. The cells will be placed under the charge of the regimental provost-serjeant, who will be allowed such assistance as may be deemed necessary, and a private soldier as cook.

648. When the strength of a detachment is under one squadron or two companies, the prison will be placed under the charge of the non-commissioned officer commanding the barrack-guard, who will perform the duties of the prison without remuneration. Care must be taken to keep the prisoners entirely apart from soldiers detained in the prisoners' room and guard room cells.

649. Barrack cells will be inspected, and each prisoner visited daily by an orderly officer of the unit and by a medical officer, who will make their reports to the officer commanding.

650. When it is necessary to imprison in barrack cells soldiers of other units, such soldiers are to be attached to and subsisted by the unit to which the prison is appropriated until they are released and sent to their own unit.

651. The regimental provost-serjeant will be assisted in maintaining order and regularity in barracks or camp by the regimental police, who will be placed under him. These men will be selected for their general steadiness. Their number will vary according to circumstances, but is never to exceed six.

652. The duties of the regimental provost-serjeant and regimental police are similar to those of the garrison provost-serjeant and the garrison police, but will be confined generally to maintaining order and regularity in their own barracks and units. They, however, have authority to quell all disturbances in the garrison, and may, if occasion arises, apprehend offenders of any corps.

Subscriptions and donations in support of the Charity will be thankfully received by Messrs. Cox & Co., Charing Cross, London, S.W.; by the Secretary, C. R. Low, Esq., to whom crossed cheques and Postal Orders on the Charing Cross Post Office should be made payable; or by the Superintendent Miss K. Bartlett, at the Home at Hampstead.

The Home was constructed and is equipped for 180 girls, and the desire of the Committee is to maintain the full complement.

The need of such an institution is apparent from the fact that there are on an average three candidates brought forward at each election to every one admitted.

The Committee earnestly appeal to a generous public to aid them in the support of the Charity. They also ask for the co-operation in the good work of every Regiment and Corps.

A contribution of but 6d. a year from each Non-Commissioned Officer and Man throughout the Service would provide for the support of a child from every Regiment.

The Home is open to visitors daily between 10 and 5, except on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Committee invite the inspection of all friends of the Soldier.
